Santa Fe, NM – SITE Santa Fe was recently the host of a high energy, international, artistic think tank convened to prepare for the Seventh International Biennial. For one week in early January, SITE invited 25 artists and 5 curators from 17 countries to town--most coming to the US for the first time ever--for a total immersion course in all things Santa Fe. They visited many different historical locations, met SITE staff, board and community members, saw the exhibition design by Tod Williams + Billie Tsien, and determined sites for each commission, and then returned home to formulate their ideas and proposals.

In June, they all return to Santa Fe to build the works, some in SITE's building and some in off-site locations all over town, for the opening June 20-22, 2008. The exhibition runs through Oct. 26, 2008.

Together with Mr. Fung, the partner institutions and the curatorial team are planning a project with several singular attributes: 1) all emerging artists, 2) all will be making new commissions, 3) all site-specific, and 4) all of the works will be temporary, existing only until the end of the exhibition with many of the materials expected to be recycled back into the community.

SITE Santa Fe announces the following participating artists for its Seventh International Biennial, Lucky Number Seven, curated by Lance Fung, scheduled for June 22-October 26, 2008:
